

THE START OF SOMETHING BEAUTIFUL

In 1886, David H. McConnell founded the California Perfume Company, which would become Avon, in New York City. As an unsuccessful book salesman, he had concocted a rose-scented perfume as a "free gift" to encourage women to buy his books. The perfume was so popular, McConnell decided to abandon the book business and start a perfume company instead.

Mrs P.F.E. Albee became the first Avon representative. Mrs Albee sold perfumes door-to-door and recruited other ladies to sell perfume. Avon offered women a chance to work outside the home in an era when they had few opportunities to do so.

This began Avon's long history of empowering women around the globe.

34 Years before women in the U.S. had the right to vote

Avon offered women the opportunity to be bosses of their own businesses and control their economic destiny's

Avon has been empowering women for over 130 years.

The company changed its name to Avon in 1939 in honour of Shakespeare's hometown, Stratford-on-Avon.

In 1989, Avon announced it would end animal testing on all its products.
IT WAS THE FIRST MAJOR COSMETICS COMPANY TO DO SO.

In 1959 operations began in the UK and for the first time, consumers were given a relaxing and affordable way to choose cosmetics from home via their friendly Avon Lady. Avon took the UK by storm and soon 'Ding Dong, Avon Calling', became a British catchphrase. In the swinging sixties, Avon secured its position among the top beauty brands in the UK.

Today, Avon is one of the top 3 beauty brands in the country, providing women with the opportunity to start up their own businesses.
